Participating at Holy Mass: Reception of Communion

by Fr. Leo

As the people come forward to receive, the greatest reverence must be maintained, the entire focus should be on Christ present in the Eucharist. The posture of recipients should reflect that reality, Hands should be folded appropriately while in line and as the recipient approaches the minister a profound bow should be made prior to receiving, but not in such a way to be disruptive. The Eucharist can be received on the hand or on the tongue, while standing or kneeling (while stressing that the norm for the U.S. is standing).

If the Host is received on the hand, both hands should be used, forming a throne for reception, with the non-dominant hand on top so that the dominant hand is used for the transfer to the mouth. This should occur immediately, the Host should never be carried away prior to receiving. Also, if both hands cannot be used, for whatever reason, reception on the tongue is highly recommended. If receiving on the hand every care should be taken that every particle of the host is consumed and that nothing falls to the ground.

After receiving the Blessed Sacrament, each person should return to the pew and give thanks giving for the gift they have just received. In the U.S. it is common to kneel for a period after receiving, remembering that if common singing continues it is good to participate as one is able. Kneeling is the common posture until the Eucharist is reposed in the Tabernacle. Once the Blessed Sacrament is in the Tabernacle, it is appropriate to be seated, or you can of course remain kneeling in prayer if you desire to do so. If there is not enough time to give thanks during the Rite, it can be done after the Closing Rite is completed.
